Summer Studio

One look at our collection and you'll see that our product designs provide inspiration for the quieter side of life and a simpler way to live. Interior living that inspires serenity, tranquility, and balance is at the core of Summer Studio's philosophy.

From ideation to prototype production, the entire design process evolves toward producing pieces that achieve simplicity in aesthetics, functional justification, quality craftsmanship -- and most importantly, uniqueness in design.

Our work takes a painstaking rigorous approach to ensuring the quality and craftsmanship of each piece that we produce. No detail is too small or too insignificant to be overlooked. Every component counts when it comes to our products.

Each piece is made locally in Southern California. This allows us to be intimately involved in the production process so that the final result is a piece of work that accurately reflects our expectations and the expectations of the customer.

Creative Director – Jack Sasaki

Jack Sasaki's accomplishments include more than two decades of artistic endeavors that first began as a child in Tokyo where he learned to hone his innate artistic talent. Sasaki went on to further sharpen his skills by securing a Masters of Architecture from the University of Pennsylvania, and an MBA from UCLA. Following his educational studies, Jack applied his imaginative and architectural talents into becoming a high-end residential developer and product designer.

During these years, Jack quickly learned that he possessed an intuitive talent for highly impactful and unique thematic product designs. Sasaki utilized his talents as he amassed an additional decade of woodworking experience and embarked designing and creating unique pieces of furniture. Jack's philosophy is grounded in creating intelligent and progressive pieces of furniture that reside at the intersection between function and art.

Nord Chair

Folk art charm and contemporary aesthetics coexist harmoniously in the Nord Chair. Inspired by a boldly humble antique Swedish folk furniture, the chair's line and form are deceptively simple. The mindful attention to the grain of the wood adds striking beauty, which is most evident on three symbolic back plates. A carefully curved back rail and contoured seat provide exceptional comfort, while the slightly tapered legs without stretchers add contemporary and robust expression to the chair.

ALPINE STOOL

Descended from rustic European Milking Stool, Alpine Stool is the simple interpretative result of a careful volumetric study of turned wood components. The three-legged stool delivers a highly sturdy, T-shape stretcher base construction that forms extremely strong joints, while remarkably defying traditional wood construction. The comfortably contoured seat is made of quarter-sawn lumbers. The piece's understated elegance makes it a perfect multi-use companion in the living room, bedroom or bathroom or any room of the house.

ISE BATH STOOL

Developed in collaboration with COMMUNE DESIGN, the Ise Stool is an interpretation of Japanese Hinoki stools, adopted to the contemporary western life style. Made of majestic Alaskan Yellow Cedar, used in the making of boats and totem poles by Native Americans, the stool reveals a warm creamy color and a beautiful tight grain. The wood's decay resistance makes this stool perfect for places with high moisture, such as bathrooms, showers and saunas. The design is strikingly minimal yet robust. All the edges are rounded to a small radius, giving the stool a softer presence. This product is flat-packed for a smaller carbon footprint and does requires some easy assembly.
